Communication gaffes: a root cause of malpractice claims

TWO FUCKING PARAGRAPHS DEFINE THE DIRECTION IN 2003 – April 16th 2003. How many days = months and years ago was that written?

The importance of developing rapport with patients cannot be overemphasized. Effective communication skills are a critical tool that assists th establishing that optimal patient rapport. Physicians need to keep in mind that today's health care consumers, particularly those in the baby bo age groups, have much more medical knowledge than senior citizens. Both young and old, however, often judge the quality of care received o physician-patient interaction. Certainly, the physician's skill and reputation play an important role in a patient's confidence. However, many if n assume that physicians have the requisite technical skill to treat their medical problems. From the patient's perspective, therefore, what separ or average physician from the truly great physician is how well the physician practices the "art" of medical care, conveying those highly valued compassion and caring concern that patients seem to need so much.

All too often, when physicians do not communicate caring concern, especially when the care is painful, difficult, or results in less-than-optimal i inevitable cycle of miscommunication occurs among patient, family, and physician. Under these circumstances, patients who express their an may cause the physician to react defensively in a way that may be perceived as hostile or arrogant. Most often it is this response that causes the advice of an attorney, because poor communication between a physician and patient can lead an already angry, dissatisfied patient to beli poor even when it was entirely appropriate (5). In the arena of physician liability, the burden of "successful" patient-physician communication li (5). That is not to say that patients do not share the burden, but society and the courts have deemed that physicians have the ultimate respon: clarifying, facilitating, documenting, and reinforcing discussions related to their patients' condition, treatment, and prognosis (5).

The Betrayal of The Commons

by Richard Thieme

The cornerstone of capitalism, it has been said, is a handshake.

The legal embellishments that constitute the law books lining the shelves of any lawyer, those laws are footnotes to the many ways people have betrayed the letter of the law, the spirit of the contract, the meaning of the handshake.

Trust, not money, makes the world go around. Money is an emblem of the exchange of trust. It doesn't exist except as an invention.

And trust has been broken.

Yes, it's all smoke and mirrors, and everyone who looked already knew that. That isn't news. The news, as Alan Greenspan said pathetically it was that the moguls and bankers and investment gurus did not act according to their own self interest. They did not just risky things but insane things and thought they could hide from their karma. They betrayed the trust of one another when they made deals, invented bogus instrument ones unwisely, and they betrayed the trust of all of us. Nor will they pay the penalty they should. They never do. They never do.

Every structure built to ensure trust of those people and their institutions is now suspect. Every one.

We trusted Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to keep good books and not take risks beyond their ability to manage risk or ours to understand what they betrayed that trust.

We trusted agencies like Standard and Poor's to rate corporations accurately so we had a clue when we saw AAA on a bond or note.

They betrayed that trust.

We trusted the wise old men of the Fed, sitting on their dais like judges, looking down on plain people, to think about their actions, follow out the heed voices of caution and alarm.

They betrayed that trust.

We trusted the SEC to ensure that a failure to open the books by a man with a charming smile and ties to many Wall Street friends, so easy was deceit, we trusted that his lack of transparency would raise red flags, we trusted the SEC to do their job and not sell us out because they were criminal in their acts, or just plain dumb.

They betrayed that trust.

The astonishing thing about this country, at the present moment, is that our rage took the form of lowering the approval rating of our leaders out of office in the belief, apparently, that we might rebuild trust. Is that good will, a belief in democracy and its processes that distinguishes America from rioting Greeks in the streets of Athens? Or are we simply stunned for the moment, trying to understand the enormity of what just

That trusting attitude, that faith in the process to turn the tide, would certainly be commendable. It is good when people are high and dry and even we're wet. We are all wet, now, the showering spray of the waves hitting us all, but do we see that the sea is still coming in, higher and higher, rising tide going higher than anyone dared believe? Do we hear that glub glub glub as people try to make sane hopeful statements with their mouths full of water?

Let's return for a moment to those thrilling days of yesteryear when the streets were not so quiet and the view of the Viet Nam war was not, as through a telescope wrong way around, little distant people far away and tiny puffs of smoke as they explode.

I remember it well. Toward the end of the seventies and its ravages -- the war that tore us apart, the assassinations, the corruption in the government, the president to the FBI to the CIA -- some of the people then in power realized the danger of a populace betrayed and enraged by betrayal. The cost of a million lives and grief for the dead was a constant wail, the breakdown of constitutional guarantees was nearly absolute. Looking at the broken burned-out buildings, some came to the conclusion that "the excesses of democracy" as one called the demonstrations and organized resistance that insanity, must not be allowed to repeat.

This is not a conspiracy theory. That's a quote from one of the participants in the Bilderberg Conference at the end of that era. People of power discussed with civility what must be done in a context of mutual self-interest. That's not a conspiracy, just because the conversations took place behind closed doors and the press doesn't cover them because the press are invited guests, embedded as it were, and sworn to be silent.

No, not a conspiracy at all. This is the essential nature of oligarchic structures at a new level of trans-global mutuality that converged into the global financial networks we inhabit today.

"Trust us," our leaders have recently said even as they threaded the machinery of surveillance and social control through our lives. To an outside observer, it might look indeed like the apparatus of a police state. But that sounds like "conspiracy" as they use the word to denigrate an opposing position talking about conspiracy.

I am talking about history. I am talking about reality.

And the fact that they betrayed our trust.

Because of S&P, we dare not buy bonds, because who knows what they might be worth? Because of the SEC, we dare not invest in stocks or funds of funds because who knows what they might be worth? Because of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac and the investment banks with whom they parted, who knows what those arcane and opaque investments might be worth?

After such knowledge, what forgiveness? Who will be the first to dare to believe the words of a leader or economist now? Who dares to prefer that shocks us now is trivial or mild?

Fear and anxiety are thick in the air like cordite after a gunshot. That will not dissolve if we buy something shiny or big, go see a cartoon mouse use the drugs that flood our lives, legitimate or not.

A "news anchor" said the other day, speaking of the sinking economy, it has gotten so bad that "people are only buying what they need."

Let that sink in. It is so bad that people are only buying what they need.

The world that collapsed was built on people buying things they didn't need. Then throwing them away and buying more.

That delusion is shredded into tatters and blows away in the wind ... this is a moment of clarity, in which like any recovering addict we can see what was insane.

Reality hurts, it is abrasive, but it restores sanity and inner order.

The tide is rising and the waves are shooting spray.

The restoration of trust is not what we need. We need to create trust in new structures appropriate for a global society. We need to come to life coming through the sidewalk from the ground up. We need to make our own word good and act as if the fractured bonds of civil society still exist. We need to bootstrap ourselves and learn again how it feels to have a handshake we can trust.

Trust, but verify, the cold warrior said. And remember LBJ as well: trust is when you've got him by the balls.

To trust those people and their words unless we have their cojones in our tight little fists is like Charlie Brown running to kick the football again.

Let's not. Let us begin by affirming the vision we see when our heads are clear.

It is quiet in the streets right now. There is only the sound of newspapers blowing down dark alleys in the twilight. The excesses of democracy sleep in their coffins, waiting for the night. Like a good patient vampire should.

We are not doomed. The resiliency and strength that makes us human beings are alive in our blood.

But boy oh boy, O masters of society on your high dais, don't push your luck. You lied first to yourselves and then to us. You set up yourselves and the antidote, you say, is to set you up all over again?

Friends, as John McCain said to strangers, friends, the United States government owns banks, insurance companies, manufacturers of farm equipment and will buy more. But conservatives still speak of "socialism" as if it's part of a democratic platform.

The old way of framing things is broken. What anyone might have meant by "capitalism" is not what we have. Not here, now now, and not in the future.

We need new skins for new wine. New frames for new ways of seeing. New words for new real things.

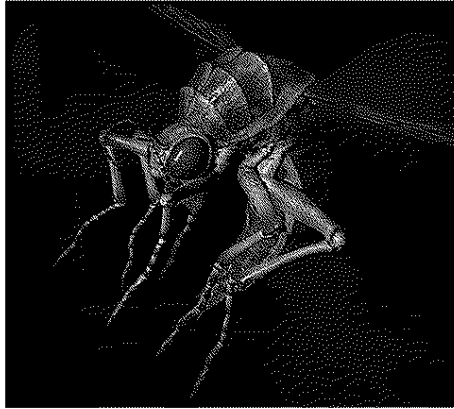

Trust, but verify. Use words as if they mean what they mean. If a talk show host or pundit doesn't, shut him off. Using words correctly is equal to trust. We know how to do that. We have done it before. Humankind is built to self-transcend and turn transitions into triumphs. It is not a function of trust alone, but a function of trust among people in the streets who are walking quietly now through canyons of broken glass, trying to get our minds out of the extent of our peril, trying to understand what happened exactly while we played the game of life as if it were virtual reality, as if when cut we did when shot we didn't scream, as if when the screen went blank it would just reboot.

This agency is FRAUDULANT in its services and practices when it comes to serving the HIV population and utilizing Ryan White Funding. My recommendation for any HIV client interested in signing with them is to run as far and as fast as you can...they treat HIV consumers with contempt and unprofessionism.

The Nation's Silent Mass Disaster

The sheer volume of missing and unidentified person cases poses one of the greatest challenges to agencies tasked with resolving these important cases.

Over 600,000 individuals go missing in the United States every year.[1] Fortunately, many missing children and adults are quickly found, alive and well. However, tens of thousands of individuals remain missing for more than one year – what many agencies consider “cold cases”.

It is estimated that 4,400 unidentified bodies are recovered each year, with approximately 1,000 of those bodies remaining unidentified after one year.[2]

This post has gone through a "fact check"

Interesting findings here -- Reuters

This "Fact Check" has the following information that relates to Gangstalking that places the common held belief that those who are suffering from "Mass Paranoia" is absolutely wrong -- because there is no such thing.

<https://www.reuters.com/.../fact-check-no-evidence-of...>

----[ QUOTES FROM THE ARTICLE ]-----

Reuters also spoke to Steven Reicher, Professor of Social Psychology at the University of St Andrews, who has studied crowd psychology for more than 40 years. He described the concept of a "mass psychosis" as "more metaphor than science, more ideology than fact".

"It arises out of mass society theories and crowd psychology theories which developed in the 19th century, and which reflected a fear of the masses," he said. "The claim was that people in the mass lose their sense of identity and their ability to reason, they regress to an inferior mental state where they are manipulable by unscrupulous leaders.

"It has been totally discredited by contemporary work on groups and crowds."

Van Bavel, who said he found the idea of mass formation psychosis "reductionist", highlighted a different account of the role of psychology, groups and leadership in the rise of Naziism (here).

So exactly why will you not actually have a conversation with me? Exactly why am I blocked across all social media to attempt to have a discussion about this? Mentioning anything of gangstalking just causes you [ LAW ENFORCEMENT SUPPORTS ] TO RUN AWAY LIKE COWARDS COWARDS COWARDS instead of having a conversation about the truth.

The matter between Mike Bires and myself was that I was asking him to get involved to the transfer of the first research findings found at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) research documents -- on the subject of gangstalking - for which the only reason that it is possible that Mike Bires reacted the way he did --

[ you to here at Law Enforcement Social ] will follow that reaction ]

This is from my interactions of Mike Bires from the Facebook Messenger Interface on Facebook [ Still Remains Blocked ] for the San Bernardino County District Attorney's Office Page:

<http://webdomains.realuphuman.net/.../Gmail...>

There are now 3 separate research findings that demonstrate the gangstalking is a real activeivty effecting our nations citizens to include me - I am a TARGETED INDIVIDUAL of GANGSTALKING for more than 16 years, unstoppable and unaddressed because of the standing view you all block my attempt to bring this subject forward. Youi can use this URL to find those documents on NIH -- but you will not link.

You should, because it does indeed deal with how law enforcement and citizens are interacting across social media.

<https://search.nih.gov/search?utf8=%E2%9C%93...>

BUT YOU WILL REMOVE THIS POST -- MY FAMILY IS BROKEN BECAUSE YOU WILL NOT DEFEND THIS NATION!

TO BLOCK ME FROM POSTING AND BLOCK THIS TRUTH!

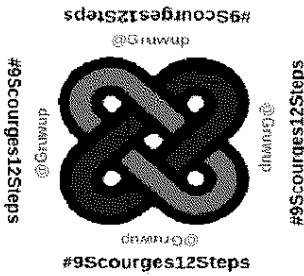

To actually DEMONSTRATE YOUR ALLEGIANCE and AID and COMFORT to those who are engaging to wage WAR against the United States of America -- to which the controversey of POLICE GANGS sourced to be in Los Angeles County which Mike Bires is from as a former police officer of Azusa Police Department --- BUSTED -- [ Keep this Public Post ] or it would be taking the understanding that this information REMOVED would be an AID and COMFORT to those who were involved in the insurrection of September 6th 2021 in Washington DC.

Absolutely no one will step forward to help me -- so therefore

Communication gaffes: a root cause of malpractice claims

Excerpt: [ Do you think you could - I DEMAND YOU MUST – face to face READ THIS TEXT to me and my mother in session later ]

The importance of developing rapport with patients cannot be overemphasized. Effective communication skills are a critical tool that assists the physician in establishing that optimal patient rapport. Physicians need to keep in mind that today's health care consumers, particularly those in the baby boomer and younger age groups, have much more medical knowledge than senior citizens. Both young and old, however, often judge the quality of care received on the basis of the physician-patient interaction. Certainly, the physician's skill and reputation play an important role in a patient's confidence. However, many if not most patients assume that physicians have the requisite technical skill to treat their medical problems. From the patient's perspective, therefore, what separates the adequate or average physician from the truly great physician is how well the physician practices the "art" of medical care, conveying those highly valued human skills of compassion and caring concern that patients seem to need so much.

All too often, when physicians do not communicate caring concern, especially when the care is painful, difficult, or results in less-than-optimal outcomes, an inevitable cycle of miscommunication occurs among patient, family, and physician. Under these circumstances, patients who express their anger and frustration may cause the physician to react defensively in a way that may be perceived as hostile or arrogant. Most often it is this response that causes the patient to seek the advice of an attorney, because poor communication between a physician and patient can lead an already angry, dissatisfied patient to believe the care was poor even when it was entirely appropriate (5). In the arena of physician liability, the burden of "successful" patient-physician communication lies with physicians (5). That is not to say that patients do not share the burden, but society and the courts have deemed that physicians have the ultimate responsibility for initiating, clarifying, facilitating, documenting, and reinforcing discussions related to their patients' condition, treatment, and prognosis (5)

Do you think that should be AFFIRMED IN A COMMIT YOU MAKE IN WRITING TO ME? I DEMAND IT! STANDARDS NEED TO BE CHANGED OBVIOUSLY!

IF YOU CALL TO CANCEL - 72 HOURS I WILL BE GOING OUT OF THIS HOUSE -- INTO -- OFF THE GRID - AND FINDING A DEEP FOREST TO WALK INTO -- AS FAR INTO THE FOREST TO FALL DOWN AND FALL DOWN TO CRY -- CRY CRY -- I DIE!

IS THAT THE OUTCOME THAT YOU ALL DESIRE?

SURE SEEMS LIKE YOU WON'T DROP THE SHIT!

SHIT SHIT SHIT - ALL OUT OF INTEGRITY OF TRUST WOBBLER!

NO MORE TIME!

There are fundamental questions about the #CARECourt proposal that must be answered.

The bill version is headed to hearing today, these are our questions for @CAGovernor @GavinNewsom, @SenatorUmberg, @SenSusanEggman. More here: wclp.org/press-release

1. How would the CARE Court respond to the crisis of insufficient housing and treatment availability for people who need either or both?
2. How would the CARE Court avoid reinforcing systemic racial biases which result in disproportionate numbers of Black and brown people unhoused and under court supervision?
3. How would the CARE Court achieve effective outcomes with coerced treatment where evidence has consistently supported adequately resourced voluntary treatment instead?
4. How would the CARE Court avoid fast-tracking vulnerable people with disabilities to conservatorship and the diminution of their autonomy and legal rights?

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Mr. James Driskill has been a client of mine for Individual Psychotherapy since October 30, 2006. He has been attending Foothill AIDS Project's (FAP) "Living Well With HIV/AIDS" men's Support Group on a weekly basis since September 2006. He was self-referred for Individual Psychotherapy.

Mr. Driskill sought treatment for a high level of stress and anxiety primarily regarding his housing situation. He became homeless in Oakland earlier in 2006 and is currently residing with his family and extended Family in San Bernardino. In addition to his unresolved eviction in Oakland he was not able to secure immediate housing through the AIDS Housing Program in San Bernardino County due to a waiting period for each new applicant. These events resulted in Mr. Driskill experiencing a high level of anger and frustration.

While in both settings of therapy, Men's Support Group or Individual Psychotherapy, Mr. Driskill accepts the fact that he has an upfront, in your face style of confrontation. The men and I have come to realize that his style is primarily a reaction to his extreme level of frustration and we have learned not to be put off by his style. In these affirming settings he has learned to modify his style of confrontation which should continue to improve. I have also been impressed with how Mr. Driskill has sought out resources on how to understand and to cope more effectively while experiencing an almost complete lack of support from agencies and individuals. One such resource was the book "Please Understand Me: Character & Temperament Types", Kiersey, Davis and Bates, Marilyn.

His Mental Health and HIV Health status were both clinically affected by his housing crisis in Oakland and here in San Bernardino. He is currently responding well to the treatments and his prognosis is good. However, I believe that until there is an appropriate resolution (he wants an absolution) of his housing conflicts, he will remain in a vulnerable state regarding his overall HIV and Mental Health status.

Sincerely,

Howard W. Newsom, PhD

This agency is FRAUDULANT in its services and practices when it comes to serving the HIV population and utilizing Ryan White Funding. My recommendation for any HIV client interested in signing with them is to run as far and as fast as you can...they treat HIV consumers with contempt and unprofessionalism.
